4. Das past progressive

Wenn du ausdrücken möchtest, was in der Vergangenheit zu einem bestimmten Zeitpunkt gerade passierte, benutzt du das past progressive.

Gebildet wird das past progressive immer nach diesem Muster:

was/were + ing-Form des Verbs

Beispiele:

Friday evening at eight o'clock Tina was at David's party, and her mother was watching TV.

Her father was reading the newspaper.

I heard a noise from next door yesterday evening.

My neighbour and his friends were practising with their rock band.

Oft zeigt man durch den Gebrauch dieser Zeitform auch, dass gerade etwas vor sich ging, als ein neues Ereignis eintrat.

Dabei wird für die Beschreibung des neuen Ereignisses das simple past verwendet und für die „Hintergrundhandlung“, die dabei gerade ablieft, das past progressive.

Beispiele:

I was reading a magazine when the lights went out.

We were having breakfast when a car stopped in front of the house.

While they were sleeping, someone stole their rabbits.

While Clexy was painting a picture, Smoky started to make a fire.

Welche der beiden Zeitformen dabei zuerst steht, ist egal. Die Beispielsätze könnten also auch so lauten:

Beispiele:

When the lights went out I was reading a magazine.

A car stopped in front of the house when we were having breakfast.

Someone stole their rabbits while they were sleeping.

Smoky started a fire while Clexy was painting a picture.
